

Deliberate Collaboration

© Julian Day, PhD

Deliberate Collaboration is the name I use to refer to my body of work and practical experience developed over the last 30 years. I offer facilitation, free masterclasses, virtual and in-person training courses, self-study courses, publications, and a train the trainer program. These offerings will appeal to anyone who wants to boost productive collaboration with other people in their work and lives.

3. A practical methodology enabling people to design and facilitate productive collaboration for a specific complex situation. Offered as a training course or facilitation service.

Designing Collaboration

Training Course

1. A white paper offering a deep dive into the underlying theory of collaboration and providing systemic insight into what it is exactly that makes collaborations work productively in practice.

2. A textbook for anybody who needs to manage anything. A practical methodology that enables anybody to enter a messy, unstructured situation and manage it. It offers an introduction to collaboration facilitation and shows how the Systemic Stairway® methodology can be applied to a wide variety of situations by answering 3 fundamental management questions:

- What is going on?
- What shall we do?
- Who commits to action?

5. A practical facilitation course for people who want to master the systemic stairway and facilitate collaborative projects within their organisation. It focuses on the practicalities and logistics of facilitating in small and large group situations.

Facilitating Collaboration

Training Course

4. A reusable methodology that anybody can use individually or collaboratively to solve problems, manage projects, improve individual or group performance. Offered as a training course or facilitation service.

Managing Collaboration

Training Course

